"We most sincerely trust that there will be no change in the present Cabinet. It cannot possibly be better constituted than it now is for the interests of the Democratic party. It does not embrace a single intellect of the first order; and among its members may be found men hardly up to a mediocrity of talent. And, so far, its policy, both foreign and domestic, has been a series of miserable mismanagement and shocking blunders. Laying the honor and interests of the country out of view, and looking only to the welfare of the Democratic cause, we should hope most carnestly that the present Cabinet may be kept in office during the present Presidential term. Then we are confident it will retire with the unanimous consent of the people."

On taking the head of the table, Judge Wilkins said, he would not permit the opportunity which presented itself here to pass without avowing himself the early, as he had been the steadfast, friend of protection to American industry. (Cheers.) He did not consider it impertinent to the case, in the midst of men possessed of practical information on the subject, to bear this testimony to his own course on this vitally important topic. He might be allowed to say that he discovered no incongruity in the position in which he found himself placed in this pleasant reunion, notwithstanding the presumed position on the question of the political party with which he acted.

CIRCUIT COURT .- Yesterday this court was en-Measrs. White were liable as sureties. It appears that Mr. Carlisle, acting as trustee for the benefit of the Gardners, under a deed executed by Mr. Richard C. Washington, was about to sell out at public sale the entire stock of dry goods then in Washington's store; that Carter, in June or July, 1846, sued out an injunction and restrained the sale; that, about the first of January, 1847, the injunction was dissolved, and then the goods, after having in the mean time remained locked up in the store, were sold. This suit is to recover the amount alleged to have been lost by delay, rent, expenses, &c , in consequence of the injunction. The appraised value of the goods is stated to have been over $13,000 at the time the injunction was laid, and the proceeds of the sale fell short of $7,000. This difference, beside costs, &c., makes the claim for damages over $7,000.

Fortuning manager, Brown, Mr. Lubey, an excellent delineator of Irish character, and a fine singer, with Fisher, Wiley, &c., make up the male portion of the company; while the ladies' department, embracing Miss Tyrrell, Mrs. Carnan, with the remarkable infant danseuse, "La Petite Carman," Mrs. Clarke, &c., is worthy of much commendation, comprising an array of talent rarely found in the stock companies of the present day, and capable of presenting the drama in its various phases in a very creditable manner. A pleasant resort is offered in the Adelphi to visiters to the capital during the winter, of which they will doubtless avail themselves; and the managers promise to spare no pains to present attractions of a superior order, and are for that purpose in treaty for, or have concluded engagements with, most of the "luminaries" of the stage. NAUTICAL INVESTIONS.

Two very ingenious models of inventions for the comfort of those who "go down to the sea in ships," have been exhibited at the Merchant's Exchange in this city during the week. PAMPHLETS OF THE DAY. Among those that the day has brought forth in our press prolific city, is one entitled, "Oriental, Amusing, Instructive and Moral Literary Dia logues; comprising the love and disappointment T Cunningham, Va of a Turk of rank in the city of Washington. By Christopher Plato Castanis, of Scio, Greece." Mr. Castanis will be remembered by many of your citizens as an intelligent lecturer on Greece. This little pamphlet is made the vehicle, in a conversational form, of conveying the expression of the author's republican sympathies in behalf of Greece and Turkey, as well as of discussing some philo-logical questions, intended to prove that modern Greeks pronounce their language as the ancients did. In the closing dialogue of the series the Turk

Whatever might be the difference in our political sentiments, he had long been the unwavering advocate of protection to domestic manufactures. (Cheers.) From his carliest days—from the days when the arrival of an Indian canoe, or a French pirouge, manued by half-naked natives, was hailed as a great event, and was sufficient to attract all the ragged boys in the town to the wharf—he had witnessed the growth of our manufactures and watched the fostering influence of protection.

Without protection, where, what would have been our revenues? The very exercise of the functions of the Government depended on protection. Washington, Adams, Jefferson—all, all were friends of protection. We are all friends of protection, officing, he trusted, only in degree: as to whether 20 or specific duties, and other minor particulars. He repeated we were all friends of protection; upon some articles ad valorem duties ought to be levied, upon others specific duties would be required. Protection! Upon what else did the machinery of Government depend? What else had nourished our manufactures, and extended the influence of our great country over the whole earth?

But he would not detain the company longer. He had seized the occasion to say that he did not consider his presence here to night as inconsistent with his political associations, and to thank them for the distinguished honor of selecting him to preside over their festivities. (Cheers.)

Most heartily would I echo the writer's appeal: 'Let individuals of all classes show that they have the hearts and sensibilities of men, whenever any gaged in the trial of certain suits brought by James of these abuses come within their observation; and M. MERCHANTS' BANK OF CANANDAIGUA.—Considerable excitement was produced yesterday morning by the telegraphic report that Drury had put in circulation $50,000 of bills more than had been countersigned by the Comptroller; and had also altered the denomination of some of the countersigned notes.

It seems, however, that there is no foundation for the first report. The officers of the banking department say that no more bills have been issued than are secured by deposited stocks; and the office at which the bills are redeemed in this city has never had an altered note presented for exchange. It is probable, therefore, that none are in circulation; and such is reported as the opinion of money-dealers in New York, where the report originated.

ORATORIO.

ON the 29th instant, (Thanksgiving day,) there will be a concert given of Vocal and Instrumental Music, to aid in liquidating the debt of the new Catholic church of St. Ignatius, near Grimesville, Prince George's county, Maryland.

The choir of St. Matthews' church, of Washington city, have generously offered their assistance on the occasion, and to those who have been so fortunate as to hear them, it is needless to speak in their praise.

tunate as to hear them, it is needless to speak in their praise.

From the arrangements made, there is expected a perfect galaxy of beauty from the surrounding cities and counties. Refreshments will be prepared in abundance, and with a view of adding further attraction, (after the close of the concert,) the devotees of Terpsichore will adjourn to the residence of a gentleman in the neighborhood, where ample provision for their enjoyment has been made.

The price of admission 50 cents, and one dollar additional for those gentlemen who attend the dance.
